

ALEXANDRIA, VA.

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 29, 1882.

MANY NORTHERN newspapers belonging to the Arthur or Mahone wing of the republican party attempt to stimulate the war feeling of their readers by asserting the existence of numerous illicit distilleries throughout the South, and that the opposition to their destruction is proof positive of the disloyalty of the people of this section. Mr. Raum, the commissioner of internal revenue, to the contrary, says that the business of illicit distilleries has been entirely suppressed; but he is as incorrect, as the newspapers referred to. People who live in the mountainous regions of the country, away from railroads, North as well as South, to whom transportation is a matter of almost insurmountable difficulty do, and would continue to, were the tax on whiskey removed, distill enough of that article to supply their immediate wants, and they are their property, and think the laws authorizing its destruction cruel, unjust and opthink so-but that their opposition to these laws is indicative of their disloyalty to the government is an assertion that is utterly unwarranted, and that has no foundation except in the malignant minds of the partisan sectionalists who give it utterance.

THE RICHMOND and Washington organs of General Mahone are profuse in their rein the effort to reduce the tax on tobacco.

The republicans in causes resolved that The republicans in caucus resolved that The republicans in caucus resolved that there should be no reduction in the tax on nominal reason that it had nothing to do, The body was cut nearly in two and horribly tobacco and whiskey. Finding that action unpopular they subsequently agreed to report in favor of a reduction, but with no real intention of adopting that report. The tion of this session has been altogether for benefit the rich and the monopolists at the expense of the people of the country, and expense of the people of the country, and as soon as the measures of relief to the people any bills for the benefit of the people, no agreed to let the whole thing drop. General may be. Mahone's proposition to reduce the tobacco tax to 8 cents only received two republican votes besides his own, that of Mr. Cameron. who is bound by his bargain to vote with him, and that of Mr. Kellogg, who wanted to make the bill as objectionable as possible so as to defeat it, because it reduced the tariff on sugar, the staple of his State.

The warrant of arrest issued by Judge Hughes, charges Popham with having betrayed a trust in misappropriation of moneys entrusted to his care. The facts are as follows: In order to facilitate the transacion of business, Judge Hughes, of the United States Court, signed a number of checks which Colonel Popham, who was the clerk, was to fill out and use in the proper dispoition of the court fund. The checks being This money so used was the property of bankrupt states and various Richmond banks. It was this liscovery of the misappropriation of this fund that led to Colonel Popham's arrest and subsequent discharge from the position of clerk of the court, which discharge Judge Hughes promptly ordered upon the discovery of the facts in the case. Col. Popham's friends claim that he did not intend to steal the money but to resitute it. The warrant for his arrest has not yet been served upon Popham. Had the money been stolen from the fund" of a State court Popham could be indicted and convicted upon a charge of grand larceny. As, however, the fund was that of a United States ourt, it is very doubtful if any definite charge gainst him can be sustained, the offence being, in egal language, a misappropriation of funds and a breach of trust. The personal friends of Pophan say that he has not been in proper possession of his faculties for some time past, and regret the position in which the accused is placed.
Assistant District Attorney Taggart, of Washington, who has charge of the District Attorney's ffice during Mr. Corkhill's absence, said last night that he had received no warrant for Col. Popham's arrest, neither have the police authorities.

Col. Popham passed through this city right before last on the South Bound Midand train.

The Richmond Dispatch of to day says 'A few days ago United States Commissioner Pleasants issued a warrant for the arrest of Colonel Popham, in which he was charged with forging the name of Judge Robert W. Hughes, of the United States Court for W. Hughes, of the United States Court for the Eastern district of Virginia, and embezzling $2,100. The warrant was placed in the hands of United States Marshal Hughes, and by him returned to the court unexecuted, by reason of the fact that the Colonel could not be found within the scope of the Marshal's jurisdiction. This was Thursday, and as soon as this returned to the scope of the Marshal's jurisdiction. turn was made the warrant was sent to United States District Attorney G. D. Corkhill, of the District of Columbia. The money used was that in the hands of the Court by reason of the bankrupt cases of D. C. Mayo, and the Dollar Savings Bank. "As soon as the forgery was discovered ol. Popham was removed from his position as clerk of the United States District Court, and his deputy, Mr. W. B. Ball, appointed in his stead. Mr. Wall, however, has not as yet qualified, but is discharging the duties of the office as deputy clerk. In a few perate and cekless strategy of charging him with days, perhaps, he will take the oath of office a crime had to be resorted to. This crime to-day, and execute the customary bond.

"Col. John R. Popham was born in Rappahannock county, Va., and is now about 40 years of age. He is a man of diminutive statue, but of forceful and impetuous disposition, and in his habits has always indistrict of our nature calls for a rebuke of this cated a fondness for pleasure, and a free-dom from the restraints that govern most men in their social intercourse.

Previous to the war he went to Richmond and was employed as a clerk or salesman in a store. When the news came of the establishment of the Confederate States Government at Montgomery and the threatened attack upon Fort Sumter, at Charleston, Col. Popham was seized with the idea of offering his services to the young government. He had made many friends by reason of his generous and affable manners, and Finance and Accounts, reported as correct among others Beverly Douglas, who gave young Popham a strong letter of introduction to friends at Charleston. Popham went to Charleston, but did not enter the army, and after the scene of war drifted back to Virginia returned to Richmond, where he remained until the war closed. He then removed to Bath county, and entered the law office of Judge W. H. Terrell. With his usual address he succeeded in soon becoming a favorite in his new home, and aptness in political affairs caused attention to be directd to him, resulting in his being returned to Richmond as a member of the House of Delegates from Bath county. While a member of the House he showed great activity as a politician, and made quite a reputation for shrewdness in debate and aptness in repartee. He returned to Bath county at the close of the session of 1870-71, and became involved in a personal quarrel with a man whom he killed by a blow on the head with a billet of wood. He was tried and acquitted for this offence. In 1871, when Robert W. Hughes was made Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern district of Virginia he tendered Col. Popham the position of clerk of the court, and it was accepted. After this Popham was made a member of the Republcan State Central Committee, and took an active part in the political struggles of his party. He founded the Intelligence newspaper in the spring of 1879, and during its conduct had a difficulty with his business manager, in which Popham discharged a pistol at him at such close range that grains of the charge of powder were imbedded in the face of the young man. For this offence he was fined $200 and sent to jail for a month. In the early agitation of the debt question Colonel Popham was a pronounced Debt-Payer, but later he went overto the Mahoneites, and stuck to this party up to the time of his misfortune.

The last office to which he was elevated was that of superintendent of the foldingroom of the document department of the House of Representatives.

mon schools were to be converted into poli-tical agencies; the right of the people to elect their own officers was in a measure to be taken from them, and other heretofore unknown and dangers measures were to be inaugurated. To accomplish these purposes a degrading and tyrannical caucus system was enforced by rules degrading to those who were forced by the party lash to adopt it-insulting to their manhood and a betrayal of the public trust confided to them by the people. The ultimate object of all this was to get control of the whole political power of the State. and hand it over to the daring leader of the party to be utilized by him to advance his ambitious personal schemes; and it was all to be done quick y and before the people could be warned of the danger. They, through their faithless representatives, were to be converted into a new political party with new principles and doctrines, all for the special benefit of the leader and his friends. We, foreseeing the tendency of these measures, alarmed at the impending danger-refusing all offers of place or profit as the price of a betrayal of the trust confided in ns—conscious of the rectitude of our motives—determined to use every effort to thwart these measures. What we did is a part of the political history of the last Legislature. Our deliberate purpose was, and is still, to protect, as far as we can, the liberties of the people against the dangerous aggression of a growing and irresponsible one man power known in this State as "Mahoneism." For this we are denounced by what once was the readjuster Legislature as "traitors." We appeal to all most readjuster the state of the sta We appeal to all good people of all parties whether our efforts are entitled to a respectful consideration. If so, we earnestly ask the whole people to forget for the present all past political differences—to bury all party hostility—to subordinate all existing principles and prejudices to the living issue of the day and unite in one supreme effort to throttle in its infancy this incipient despotism. There is no time to lose. This intended outrage against everything dear to these people must not succeed. The State is deprived of a valuable officer, and against the express will of a majority of the people of the State, simply because it was feared he might become a dangerous rival to the present self-constituted leader of a party he is manipulating for his own purposes, because Mr. Massey refused to subscribe to his new revolumeasures and declined to degrade himself to the position of a subordinate instrument to be used at the will of this leader. This was his only offence. His previous political and official action had won the affection of his party as few men eyer did. To crush out this affection for him the desto the shame of his persecutors, remains unproven. Is it possible that here in Virginia such power can be exercised? Have we come to this? Can a free people tolerate such deeds as these and retain as the instrument to put down the men who were forced to single him out as a personal sacrifice in order that they might the more effectually crush out the liberties of the people and promote their schemes of personal ambition.

We humbly ask that all good men of all political parties who are true friends of constitutional government will forget for the present all politi-cal differences and unite upon Mr. Massey as the congressional candidate at large. In our humble opinion, it would be appropriate in the present crisis, and the result would be a success-not only a success, but a triumph. It would not only be a defeat to bossism, but a crushing humiliation. Reconciliation of past differences upon the debt question-that we all may unite to prevent an impending political catastrophe-should be the

THE STRIKING MINERS .- A dispatch from Cumberland says that the New Central Coal Company's miners met in Lonaconing, and, after an inharmonious meeting of several hours, decided not to resume work. It is said the vote was influenced by the illusive hopes of a compromise set forth by the leaders, who thought terms might be made today. Four carloads of lumber were sent to the Koontz mine of the New Central Coal Company for the erection of a building to accommodate new labor, which the company will import at once. It is said the miners will hold another meeting to-day. It is further believed that some bave expressed themselves as intending to go to work, the Knights of Labor to the contrary notwithstanding. Matters progress well at Eckhart and at Hoffman.
